The Speech Delivered By Major Douglas To Legislative Assembly

Some Aspects On The Douglas System In Alberta Given In Speech To Agricultural Committee

Now that the excitement attendant upon the results of Major Douglas visit has subsided, it may be useful for us to sum up the results. I feel that however imperfect it is done, a crystallisation of the thought generated and our memories are distorted by the afflux of time and the sequence of events.

Major Douglas came to Alberta in response to an invitation from the Agricultural Committee of the Legislative Assembly. The Committee had been engaged for some time in studying monetary matters and had called witnesses to give evidence on the Douglas proposals. Arising out of this, Major Douglas himself was called, and it shows a good deal of enterprise and vision on the part of the Provincial Assembly that it did not neglect this opportunity of securing evidence at first hand from a man who has made for himself a world wide reputation in matters of economics.

On the morning of April 6th, Major C. H. Douglas commenced giving evidence. The galleries and floor of the chambers were packed with visitors, and in order that those who were unable to attend might hear, a microphone was installed and the proceedings broadcast.

After the address of welcome, which was delivered on behalf of the Assembly by W. G. Farquharson, Major Douglas gave an address during the course of which he touched upon the origin of money, and dealt with some phases of the financial system as we have it to day. 'Provision for employment is not a fundamental objective of the financial system,' he said. He went on to say that the chief object was the making of profits and the ideal system would be one in which there would be no employment at all. In his analysis of the Gold Standard he showed that it was impossible for all bank deposits to be paid out at one time instancing the situation in Great Britain when, after a run on the banks, hundreds of millions of pounds on deposit were left unrepresented by any tangible evidence of wealth. He showed that in the final analysis, the basis for the issue of all money and all credit is the wealth of the nation at large, and as a very proper deduction, that the power of creating such credit should belong to the people at large.

It is in this connection that Douglas makes his greatest contribution to modern thought and it is a point that cannot be over-emphasised. I believe that Government ownership of what Douglas calls the "Ticket System," and in particular that part of it embodying the issue and creation of credit, is the greatest single financial issue which confronts the world today. That, together with monetisation of real wealth is what Douglas hammers at constantly and no matter what else he says that you cannot agree with; no matter what he leaves unsaid which had expected him to say, I beg of you to remember that he advocated ownership in common of the function of creating credit. When Douglas speaks of "credit" he does not refer to loans nor does he use the word in the sense that it is commonly used. He uses it in the sense that all money is credit. In carrying on our financial affairs it is not convenient to exchange actual goods and so we use currency, cheques, drafts or other means of exchange which demand trust or "belief" on the part of negotiators. The word "credit" is derived from the Latin word credo meaning I trust, or I believe. Douglas has coined an expressive title in which is bound up his whole philosophy. He calls it "Social Credit."

These last few years have been rife with systems of various kinds all drawn up with the greatest sincerity and with the laudable aim of ameliorating the conditions under which we live. There has been such a plethora of systems that one is bewildered by their numbers, and I think that wherever possible points of contact should be noted and agreed upon so that there may be as little clashing as possible. There is a great danger as Douglas pointed out that by dissension among those with a common goal, the object may be lost sight of, and the cause lost or delayed by reason of unproductive and unnecessary strife. For myself, I believe in any sound cause which looks forward to the improvement of our common lot.

The Economic Reconstruction Association is a wing of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation which embodies in its printed programme many evidences of Douglas thought. Perhaps the chief of these is found in clause 2, which sets out in no uncertain terms the belief in the common ownership of the function of creating credit. In this most important feature of all E. R. A. is in harmony with Douglas and the general idea of Social Credit. If I have a message for you at all it is to point out this very fact and to plead with you for a recognition of your common objective. What ever may be the final objective let us agree that the first is monetary reform. Do not be too anxious to find points on which they disagree others will do that for you soon enough. Seize upon items of agreement so that you may go forward together, each party strengthened in numbers and enriched in thought by the contribution of the other.

But to return to Major Douglas and the enquiry at Edmonton. It has been said that during the course of that speech, and also the one in Calgary, he told us nothing new. He talked about the same things that have occupied the attention of reformers for years, even generations. This criticism was well founded, but it goes to prove that Douglas has much in common with other advanced thought and it is also true that many of the ideas which are commonly accepted today by advanced thinkers, he was expressing fourteen years ago when his words fell on deaf ears. The big old problems are still big and even older, and one could not expect Douglas to conjure out of his

Obstacles To International Agreement

Obstacles to international agreement are many and various; so many, so various as to belittle the vision of the conferees and defeat the ends sought.

Particularly is this true when a complex of nations is represented round the conference table. Despite the good intentions of conferees, the high sentiments they express and the noble purposes they proclaim, invariably dissonance interrupts the even tenor of the proceedings, divergent points of view protrude themselves and, with each interruption and each protrusion, practical agreement becomes the more remote.

The conflict of opinion appears less with regard to the general objective sought, as with regard to the methods by which that objective can be reached. In the ultimate analysis, political rather than practical issues prove the stumbling block.

These thoughts are occasioned by the succession of disasters which has befallen world conferences held for perfectly laudable purposes during recent months. The League of Nations itself, perhaps the greatest agency for world co-operation yet devised, has suffered considerable loss of prestige through recurrent manifestations of local interest, local jealousies, pride and susceptibilities. In matters such as the drug traffic, in which public rather than political and national considerations are paramount, the League has been able to take decisive action and render invaluable service. But where political and national interests and prejudices are involved, directly or indirectly, its decisions have been of less unanimous acceptance. In fact, they have seldom been effective because they have been largely ignored.

In spite of the League and the large body of opinion supporting it, where matters of national significance have been broached, the nations involved have proved a law unto themselves, using the simple expedient of withdrawal from the League as a means of asserting their right to go their own way. Disarmament questions have brought prominently into the foreground this conflict of national viewpoints, and this insensate desire for autonomy in matters affecting the peace of the world. There has been little question that world opinion, generally, favors disarmament on a sane and safe basis. It is equally true, however, that there is sharp clash of opinion as to what the basis should be and as to the methods whereby it should be undertaken. World disarmament conferences have proved futile, so far, in spite of the unanimity voiced by national spokesmen as to its desirability. All nations, it appears, are in favor of disarmament—provided the other fellow does it.

Strange as it may seem, while world conferences on the question are disheartening failures, the same can not be said with respect to understanding on the subject between particular nations. Bilateral disarmament agreements appear easy, by comparison. Where two or three nations are involved, amicable solutions come readily to hand. Britain, for example, has little difficulty in reaching understanding with Italy, Italy with France, and so on. Even with Germany amicable negotiations are possible. Yet, when Britain, Italy and France sit around a conference table with Germany, it becomes immediately impossible to focus all eyes on the same objective and on the same means of achieving that objective.

This is not to say that Germany is entirely at fault, or that the blame attaches to any particular one of the parties to the conference. It is apparently due to the complications which arise with every addition to the conference. Compromise as between nation and nation is easy; between three nations it is a little more difficult, but less difficult than when four nations are involved. Perhaps then, the real solution is to be found in multiplying bilateral disarmament agreements until the whole world is involved and all the nations are committed to peace.

The same course may be found the ultimate solvent of the world wheat problem. Apparently the London Wheat Agreement has founded on the shoals of national aspiration for, as this is written, the Argentine has virtually negated the good work accomplished in the London conference, and the United States, in reprisal, is threatening unlimited production and the dumping of its surplus on the markets of the world.

The London conference resulted in what has been acclaimed as a unanimous agreement representing the first really co-operative arrangement yet reached by the nations of the world. It was not, however, a finite thing, in itself. It left certain important decisions for later consideration, particularly the matter of minimum prices. Experts met at Rome to discuss prices in accordance with the terms of the agreement, only to be met by objections from the Argentine and demands from that country for an increase of 40,000,000 bushels in her quota allotment. Having already virtually exhausted her export quota for the year as set in the London Agreement, the Argentine demanded an additional 40,000,000 which could only be given at the expense of other great exporting countries, including Canada. The price conference, however, reached certain tentative conclusions which were submitted to the governments involved.

The next stage in the proceedings was the London conference on prices to amend or ratify the decisions of the Rome discussions. Here again, clash of national interests proved a handicap. Doubts have been raised whether or not price-fixing by a central body is a sound practice to adopt. In fact, British grain men have been emphatic and outspoken on the subject. The head of the London grain exchange had no hesitation in stating that the representatives of the various nations were amiable gentlemen "but they knew very little about wheat". With warnings against price-fixing, demands for increased quotas, and threats of unlimited production, the whole agreement appears in jeopardy. Obviously, the complexity of national interests is accentuated in conferences on so large a scale as that at London. Perhaps (he it repeated) the solution may be found in a series of bi-lateral agreements involving all interested parties.

"Britain Of The East"

Story Of Japan's Progress And Development Reads Like Romance

Whatever may be said of the aggressiveness of Japan in the Orient, it must be acknowledged that she deserves the designation, "the Britain of the East". Never in the history of the world has any of the backward nations made such gigantic strides forward in the path of civilization as has Japan.

The story of her progress and development reads like a romance. From the very time when she reformed her government and established democratic institutions she has gone forward in the path of educational and scientific progress and in industrial development at a remarkable rate. Her educational and scientific institutions are among the finest in the world. Moreover, her army and navy have reached a stage of development that is second to no other country. Hence, Japan is a nation so perfectly equipped from a technical and scientific point of view that her competition may well be feared by other nations. To make light of her industrial development shows a lack of appreciation of the remarkable progress she has made.—Brantford Expositor.

DEPRESSED BY ACUTE ACIDITY

There can surely be no doubt about the effectiveness of a remedy for acidity that can give such permanent relief as in this woman's case:—

"I suffered for many years from acidity in various forms," she writes. "At last it became so acute that every morning I woke with a gnawing pain and a great depression of spirits. I tried Kruschen Salts, and the effect was magical. The pain subsided and the depression lifted like a cloud. I have taken the daily dose of Kruschen ever since. That was about five years ago, and the acidity will never lose its effect."—(Miss E. M. H.)

Kruschen is so effective with acidity because it neutralises acid, takes all the ferment out of it, and gently expels it from the system. And by stimulating your organs of elimination to perfect regular action, Kruschen will prevent this harmful acid from even accumulating again. After that you'll experience no more misery after meals.

Canada's Metal Industry

Dominion Dominates World Sales President Of Mining Institute

"Within 20 years Canada's metal industry has grown" by leaps that it was possible to-day for the Dominion to produce practically all the copper, most of the lead and zinc and all of the nickel needed in the Empire, S. G. Blaylock, president of the Canadian Institute of mining and metallurgy, stated.

He was addressing a complimentary banquet given to him by the Grand Forks Board of Trade in connection with the convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Eastern British Columbia.

Canada dominates the world in copper, nickel, lead and zinc, said Mr. Blaylock.

Mr. Blaylock thought there was little likelihood of the price of gold dropping for years to come. As a metal producer, the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Trail, of which he is vice-president and general manager, was not concerned with the 10 per cent. tax on gold. Nickel, lead, copper and zinc producers would be only too glad to pay millions in taxes on these metals if the price was 75 per cent. over the normal price of 20 years, he stated.

Japan Buying Scrap Iron

Recent Cargo From Australia Contained Variety Of Articles

Japan has been picking up scrap iron all over the world, and one of the most varied cargoes of this kind arrived the other day from Australia. There were steel rails red with rust, old sewing machines, and automobile fenders. On the top of one heap was a battered trombone. Scores of old drums ranged side by side with piles of worn-out machinery, car wheels, cooking stoves, and scores of other ancient and apparently useless articles, together with hundreds of thousands of old horseshoes. Even obsolete cannon were in the cargo.

A Good Definition

Crooning? Here is a college professor's illuminating definition of it: "An exaggerated and distorted expression of emotional feeling, a kind of semi-musical noise that is emitted from the throat and attractive to some persons because it is something new. Only people of low intelligence like it." It was described thus by Dean John Patton Marshall of Boston University College of Music.

Wants Room For Expansion

Mussolini Expresses Need For Italy To Seek Room In Africa And Asia

Geographic and historic reasons were given by Mussolini in an interview with Hector Bywater, editor of the "Daily Telegraph" in Rome, for the expansion of Italian power in Africa and Asia, and the need for a strong navy.

During the interview, Mussolini said:

"Thirty provincial capitals are situated on the coast. Rome herself is near the sea. Geography is one of the immutable factors that determine the destinies of a nation."

Then he went on to say: "Geography and history both warrant us in taking Asia and Africa as objectives. We are nearer to those two continents than any of the greater western European powers. No one should mistake the meaning of our task. We are not thinking of any territorial conquest, but everyone should know that we are thinking of a natural expansion allowing us to co-operate with the nations of Africa and the Far East."

Mussolini then turned to the problems of the League of Nations and of disarmament, saying:

"The principle of the reform of the League of Nations, which is almost universally accepted, is clear. The reforms that are being considered should only be undertaken after the closing of the disarmament conference, because if this conference fails, there will be no need to make any reforms, it will be enough to consider the work of the League of Nations as ended."

"It is generally considered that the conference will fail, at least as regards the most important objectives. The greatest armed powers will not disarm those that are not armed will be in a position to arm with a more or less defensive purpose."

Paris Hotels Face Ruin

Taxes Heavy And American Tourist Business Falling Off

Instead of opening the customary new extensions as the tourist season starts, one leading Paris hotel, the Plaza-Athene, already has closed its doors, and numerous others are on the verge of doing likewise.

Hotel managers blamed two factors for their plight. First, that an average of one-third of all money taken in must be sent to the state in the form of taxes. Secondly, that the American tourist business has almost evaporated.

"In this country for a short time more we'll have to close up, too," the director of a leading hotel in the Ettoile district declared.

Here are a few of the hotel taxes: Six per cent. of every penny collected as a luxury tax. Four per cent. of all room bills as a city tax.

A social insurance tax. A tax for apprentices. A tax for mutilated soldiers. A tax for operation. A property tax. This totals from 25 to 50 per cent. of receipts.

Uniform Standard To Be Adopted By Four Western Provinces

A new standard of school readers has been adopted by representatives of the four western provinces to be used in the public schools. These representatives have been meeting from time to time for the past two years judging the contents of the books. The seven books in the new series are to be known as "Highroads to Reading." The books will be adopted as school readers for the fall term of 1935. All will be uniform in style and will be admirably bound and will have colored illustrations. The printing will be done in Toronto.

Radio Signals For Aviators

Ingenuous Device Will Keep Fliers In Defined Lines

A device for visually interpreting signals of aeronautical radio range beacons has been developed by W. B. Jackson and L. M. Harding, radio engineers of the U.S. commerce department's aeronautics branch, according to Rex Martin, assistant director of aeronautics.

Signals, Martin explained, are received through headphones by aviators during periods of poor visibility. The device features an indicator which, fitted in the instrument panel, is similar to the contrivance used for blind landings. It is open-faced and has two needles—one vertical and one horizontal. The vertical needle, Martin explained, is chief indicator and when an aeroplane leaves the course defined by a radio beacon, this needle will move accordingly. However, he added, if the aeroplane is exactly on course, the vertical pointer will remain in centre of the dial.

The horizontal indicator, the official revealed, shows the volume of received signals, which the pilots may adjust as he sees fit.

Egg Trade Responsibility

Responsibility As To Eggs Below Grade Placed On Seller

In case of dispute about properly marked cases of graded eggs, the Canadian egg regulations are quite explicit. No case or container of eggs is considered to be properly marked if, upon examination by an inspector, the case is found to contain more than an average of 81 per cent. below grade, apart from breakage. In transactions between wholesalers, or between a wholesaler and a retailer, any complaints by the purchaser with respect to eggs below grade must be made to the seller within 36 hours of the receipt of the eggs. Thus, responsibility as to eggs below grade is upon the seller for the period of 36 hours after delivery to the buyer. After the expiration of the 36 hours the responsibility as to eggs below grade is upon the person in whose possession such eggs are found.

Want Temporary Employees Brought Under Civil Service Act

Representations on behalf of various classes of civil servants were made by V. C. Phelan, president of the Civil Service Federation of Canada, before the commons civil service committee.

Mr. Phelan asked that 316 long temporary employees in various government departments who had been eligible for permanent appointment prior to 1927, but through negligence or some other cause were not appointed, now be brought under the Civil Service Act.

Public School Education

Public school education in Canada costs $63.63 per year per pupil, according to reports published by the Canadian government. The report shows the total expenditure is about $165,000,000 a year. In 1932 there were 86,216 teachers, 2,993,116 pupils in the Canadian school system.

Increased Payrolls

Movement In British Columbia To Improve Working Conditions

Payrolls in British Columbia have been increased by approximately $200,000 per month since the provincial department of labor started its drive through the board of industrial relations and other agencies to improve working conditions within the provinces. Hon. George S. Pearson, minister of labor, has estimated.

In the sawmill industry alone, the advance was about $85,000 a month, he said. The aim of the board so far, Mr. Pearson said, had been to set minimum wage scales as high as could be paid by the industries affected, but not so high they would be forced to stop operations. As conditions improved within a particular occupation, the level could be raised if necessary.

Trying To Find Secret

Manufacturers Seek Buddhist Method Of Producing Stainless Steel

To study four columns which have stood for 2,000 years without showing a sign of decay or rust, a body of European steel manufacturers are visiting India. They hope to learn how people of those days produced stainless steel. The columns were erected by Asoka, the great Buddhist emperor, in four districts of his Indian Empire. Each stands on a high rock and is inscribed with the laws of Asoka's reign. Through the centuries earthquakes have not shaken them and storms have not rusted them. The secret of their making is believed to rest with descendants of the makers, and the steel manufacturers hope to learn this.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER
Author of "Joretta", "Lipstick Girl" Etc.
SYNOPSIS

Camilla, Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. After a party at an exclusive club, when the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the gaiety, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Camilla urges Peter to accept some of her earnings to help him along, but Peter refuses and they are parted. Camilla has gone from the studio, Avis Werth calls and persuades Peter to accept a loan of $1,000. Peter and Camilla are reconciled. Avis invites them to a party, at which she introduces Peter to well-known artists and public men.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XLV.

"You may as well wish Peter a bon voyage now," Avis advised Camilla with bright optimism. The three were in his studio, viewing the finished product of his efforts.

"Wait a minute," Peter demanded. "I haven't entered the exhibit yet, even." But his own exuberant spirits betrayed his secret hope.

The bronzed figure, poised on its oval plinth, would be entered in the national exhibit on the following day. Camilla's heart swelled with pride and ached with a wistful anxiety. Peter's sudden change of attitude toward his work, and his spirit of optimism during the past fortnight, both puzzled and delighted her.

Previously, he had wavered between contrasting moods of hope and despair, ambition and lassitude.

Money had been his difficulty and the reason for his dependency. But he had maintained a cheerful attitude ever since that day of their first quarrel, which had concerned their finances. Perhaps his chagrin over it had transformed him permanently, Camilla thought. Yet she scarcely believed it, and wondered just what had happened. Perhaps the immensity of the exhibit awards sustained him. If that were the explanation, she anticipated with dread the depth of his disappointment if he lost.

"And she is still a lady without a name," Peter observed. "The committee will have to decide the title here and now. Any ideas waiting around between you two girls?"

They looked at each other, each reluctant to speak first. Finally, Avis asked sweetly, "What was that suggestion you made the other night, Camilla?" As if it had been of too little consequence to remember.

"I don't think I can offer anything better than 'Eager Youth'. But Peter must have thought of something better during these weeks while he has worked on it."

"Fact is, I hadn't thought much about it until Avis brought up the subject several weeks ago. I thought her idea was pretty good, and still do."

"Inspiration!" he repeated thoughtfully. "She does look rather inspiring, at that," he grinned.

"Which of us—the figure or I?"

"Both of you," he bantered.

"Oh, I have a marvelous idea," Avis declared suddenly. She was giving a party for Peter that evening to celebrate the completion of his work. All her plans, so far, had unfolded as smoothly and satisfactorily as well-oiled machinery, and her confidence was mounting rapidly. She was even venturing a little ahead of her plans, so sure was she of her victory.

"Why not have a christening and unveiling of the statue to begin the party tonight? Everyone will want to see it, so we'll all come in here for a nice little ceremony and then adjourn to celebrate with whoopee. I'll get a thin white cloth to drape over it and—oh, may I, Peter—the mistress of ceremonies, name the statue and unveil it?" Her manner conveyed that she asked no more humble honor.

"Why not?" Peter inquired. What else could he say? "It's your idea. Go ahead with it."

"Then you will use my title?" hesitantly.

"Sure. It's all right. Any good sculpture is inspiring; and if it isn't, that good, the name doesn't matter, anyway."

Avis fluttered across the room. "You're a dear to let me do this, Peter. Well, I'll have to run home and get busy. I've several things to do for tonight. You carve the name to go, work absorb all his time and thought; and their life together after that would be a joyous eternity."

Her mind leaped ahead to plan for the days just before her. If Peter should go away, they would have to crowd all the happiness they could find together into the two interven-

but his attentions had been more dutiful than spontaneous, his love more perfunctory. She may have imagined that in her resentment toward Avis, however. This matter of naming his statue had hurt her immensely. Peter's work was such an intimate part of their love together and their future. It should represent as much as possible their combined interests.

It seemed to her that since Peter had not named his own work, he should have been delighted to give her that privilege and honor. Of course, had Avis' suggestion been superior to her own, she would have been glad to favor it. As it was, well, there was just a heavy weight of sadness in her heart as she prepared for the evening. She recalled with a little wry smile what Peter had said about Avis being mighty decent to him in a lot of ways.

How like a man! To give credit in full measure, pressed down and running over, to some woman whose attentions were an inexcusable intrusion, and to dismiss lightly the sacrifices and generous considerations of the woman who loved him.

The thought suddenly mocked her that if Peter were so susceptible to feminine influences right here in the same city with her, what would happen to him for a whole year in Paris without her? But she dismissed that thought as instantly as it occurred to her. She did not doubt for a moment that Peter was loyal and true. His work ahead, if he had the chance to go, would absorb all his time and thought; and their life together after that would be a joyous eternity.

Her mind leaped ahead to plan for the days just before her. If Peter should go away, they would have to crowd all the happiness they could find together into the two intervening weeks. There would be a week of anxious suspense awaiting announcement of the prize winner. It would be a difficult time for Peter. She doubted if he could work at all—and he shouldn't. He needed a complete rest after these strenuous weeks of work and anxiety.

For the moment, she regretted her commitment to her own work, but resolved to give Peter every possible moment which she could spare from it. Perhaps she could persuade him to come to the apartment with her for a week, and Rose would generously go back to her mother's for the time.

Her own work was well established now, her copy up-to-date and planned ahead. It promised success, but only time would prove that. Already, her tiny tots actually were smiling up at her from the pages of numerous magazines, waving gleefully at her from signboards along the highway, peering down from store shelves where they cavorted on the boxes of cereal which she exploited—just as she had dreamed they would be doing when he had created them on that memorable night two months before.

She was proud of her achievement, whatever the outcome might be, but she kept to herself the fact that she was the originator of the tiny tots who had recently sprung up everywhere to claim attention. Only Peter shared her secret, and not even Rose knew how important the work was which her sister did for the advertising agency.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

A MOTHER

How can a mother ever find
Through toll-filled and days, through hours of stress,
So many moods of being kind,
So many moods of tenderness?

Life, sometimes, is a lonely thing,
Bare of beauty and drained of dreams;
How can a mother always bring
Shining hope back and faith's white gleams?

Wild regrets like grim ghosts will rise,
Threatening all of the years ahead;
Who but a mother can check vain
sighs
And show how futile are tears we shed?

Failure and folly may trouble each breast;
How can a mother's clear eyes see
All of the virtues it once possessed
Bloom in the heart, as it used to be?

Sounds Almost Impossible

Professor Auguste Piccard Foresees
Fast Stratospere "Plane" Trips

Nancy, France, hears Prof. Auguste Piccard declare stratospere "plane" trips between Paris and New York in eight hours are almost at hand. With a tightly closed cabin and an air compressor for the motor, the trip will be made in fogless, stormless atmosphere 20 miles up. This original stratospere is already speculating on interplanetary trips. Perhaps a man-carrying rocket can be propelled by disintegration of matter. A round trip to Mercury might require disintegration of 110 pounds of lead. Sounds fanciful, but Professor Piccard is taking the first practical steps—he's thinking it—Christian Science Monitor.

Little Helps For This Week

"I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do." John 17:4.

He who God's will has borne and done,
And His own restless longings stilled;
What else he does or has fore-gone,
His mission he has well fulfilled.

Cheered by the presence of God I will do at each moment without anxiety and according to the strength He has given me, the work that His Providence assigns me. I will leave the rest without concern, it is not my affair. I ought to consider the duty to which I am called each day as the work God has given me to do, and to apply myself to it in a manner worthy of His glory, that is to say, with exactness and in peace. I must neglect nothing—Fenelon.

It is thy duty oftentimes to do what thou wouldst not, thy duty too to leave undone what thou wouldst do.—Thomas A. Kempis.

New Aid For Aviators

After five years of research, Leo O. Delasalle, associate on physics at the University of California, has produced an acoustic altimeter that "hears" the earth and warns whether a ship of the air is approaching too rapidly toward a possible crash. The apparatus also informs the pilot the number of feet he is distant from looming disaster.

Almost Instant Relief From Neuralgia

For Quick Relief Say ASPIRIN When You Buy

Now comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia... the fastest safe relief, it is said, yet discovered. These results are due to a scientific discovery by which an Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking. The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. An Aspirin Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And thus it is ready to go to work almost instantly. When you buy, though, be on guard against substitutes. To be sure you get ASPIRIN's quick relief, be sure the name Bayer in the form of a cross is on every tablet of Aspirin.

Will Come In Time

Law To Compel Traffic To Stop At Railway Crossings

Every little while, some advocate arises to suggest a law making it compulsory for all motor vehicles to come to a dead stop before crossing railway tracks. Motor buses now voluntarily comply with such a regulation; but the general public seem to think they are safer in their own cars than they are in buses—for what reason we do not know, for buses are usually controlled by the most experienced drivers—and in addition to this they fear that such a law would slow up traffic and cause congestion. Some day we will have such a law.

YOUR LIVER'S MAKING YOU FEEL OUT OF SORTS

Wake up your Liver Bile

—No Calomel needed
When you feel blue, depressed, sour on the world, that's your liver which isn't pouring its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. Digestion and elimination are being slowed up, food is accumulating and decaying inside you, and making you feel blue, sour, or rough. Don't go far enough. You need a liver stimulant. Carter's Little Liver Pills is the best one. Safe. Purely vegetable. Ask for them by name. Beware substitutes. 25c. at all druggists.

An Original Idea

Australian Has Plan To Make "Going Broke" Easier

Proposing a new plan for making "between-paydays" easier, a man recently placed the following advertisement in a Melbourne, Australia, newspaper: "Gentlemen who gets paid on Thursday and who is usually broke by Saturday will exchange small loans with a person who is paid on Saturday and is not broke until Thursday. References asked for and given."

Camilla smiled bravely. "But you gave mine no consideration."

"Sure. I did. Fact is, I don't know much about it. I just want to use whatever is best, regardless of whose it is. So you don't like 'Inspiration'?"

"It means nothing. As you just said, it could be applied to any piece of sculpture. I don't say that 'Eager Youth' is the best possibility, but at least it applies to the figure, and means something. A young girl standing on tip-toe and drinking eagerly from the fountain of life which she holds to her lips in the form of a fluted shell. Doesn't that describe it, exactly? There is some imagination in it, anyway. I suppose hundreds of figures and groups have been named 'Inspiration'."

"Yeah, maybe thousands," he conceded coolly. "Well, it done, I can't offend her now. She's been mighty decent to me in a lot of ways."

Camilla held tightly to her words and emotions until she could escape. "Then, it's all settled," she said lightly, moving toward the door. "I'll have to run home and dress now for the party. See you later, dearest," and kissed him goodbye.

Alone, she thought bitterly, how treacherous love was. It took you to the heights of happiness only to dash you down mercilessly and fendishly to the bottomless pit of anguish. She just couldn't understand Peter these days.

Was it Avis who had so changed him? True, he had been sweet enough to her whenever she saw him,

Chinook Wins Ball Tournament May 24 Youngstown Sports

The Chinook ball team entered in the Youngstown baseball tournament held on May 24, with what appeared to be a weak team, owing to the lack of pitchers.

Carlson took the box for the first 4 innings against Youngstown, and hurled exceptionally good ball, with Bidne relieving in the same fine style. Winning by a margin of 12-8.

The final game was played with the Sheebo Miners, a strong team, which gave the local boys a hard struggle.

Carlson and Bidne were on the mound, but after pitching so strenuously in the first game sired tired. Gord in Agar then did a nice job of relieving for the last two innings.

The local team featured hard hitting in both games, in this department Bidne starred on his last time to the plate, by hitting a two bagger which brought in the two winning runs. The final score being 10-11 for the local boys.

Owing to the number of players who have been wearing Chinook's uniform leaving this district, it was thought they would have a very weak team this year. But from the performance turned in at Youngstown, it would appear that the village has a team they can be proud of.

Wednesday May 30 seemed to be an off day for Chinook ball players.

In the afternoon the Cereal boys were over to play the local school team. During the first five innings the local line up appeared very weak, and showed little interest in the game, allowing the Cereal aggregation to get a 7 run lead. After that they tightened up and held their opponents down while they got 5 runs. Leaving the final score 7-9 for Cereal.

In the evening the seniors played Oyen, which proved to be a very exciting game. While the score was one sided it did not indicate the play. For the first 6 innings the play was fairly even, but in the 7th the Oyen team piled up 5 runs on some well placed drives and a couple of errors for Chinook. The game ended in the seventh inning 2-9 for Oyen.

Pretty Young Artist Gives Recital at Toronto

Margaret Waterhouse Charms Audience With Program By Augustus Bridle

Norman Wilks master worker in the cause of Liberalism who will speak to a Beaches audience this evening, last night presented in Conservatory Hall, a rare young piano artist in recital. Margaret Waterhouse Communes with communions with composers at the piano as one born to be a true artist. Slenor, demure and sparkling with sensitive enjoyment of the things she played she charmed her audience.

The platform, beautifully decorated with ferns and baskets of gorgeous bouquets and the artist in a graceful frock of pale blue chiffon made a very pleasing and attractive setting.

A Bach chorale and Prelude and Fugue revealed marvellous delicacy of tonal expression; continuously beautiful weaving of rhythmic themes and counter-themes; Bach, it seems, was a tone poet before Chopin; so this music suggested Brahms' Intermezzo of richer fabric, showed rare sensitivity to color values in tone and splendid, incisive vitality. His Capriccio B minor was so full of rhythmic tricks and sly nuances that, with this artist's almost extravagant delicacy of tone it some times seemed a bit too exquisitely fine.

On a larger canvas she painted Schman's novel legend, called Fantasi. In this the player showed how subtly she could interpret a series of mystic monologues in a most perfect atmosphere, yet with the utmost clarity of simple sensuous statement. This is true piano-poetry.

A modern group was followed by Brahms' alluring Horn Trio, with Alfred Meyer violin and R. Barrow, French horn.—Toronto Star.

Miss Margaret Waterhouse is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Waterhouse of Cereal.

Mother and Infant Child Found Drowned in Dam inner consciousness new and more horrible spectres with which to frighten and thrill us. But Douglas did bring a powerful and refreshing intellect to bear on our problems, and presented them to us from some novel and interesting angles.

On the following day, Saturday Major Douglas addressed a large public meeting in Calgary, under the joint auspices of the Men's Canadian Club, and the group of the Open Mind. I will not weary you with a detailed analysis of that splendid speech because I'm sure most of you heard it, or read the verbatim copy printed in the Calgary Herald. For this excellent and enterprising bit of reporting the management of the Herald deserves to be warmly congratulated. It was a clever and incisive speech, and one that showed on the part of the speaker a complete mastery of his subject. In it he again emphasised the need of the breaking of the monopoly of credit so that the paradox of poverty amidst plenty might be abolished and that the financial system might be made to assume its proper function in our National economy that it should be an accounting system based on physical facts, and that its chief end be to ensure the equitable distribution of the goods produced, (continued next week)

It appears that Mrs. Head got up early, and when Mr. Head arose found that his wife and baby were not in the house, he immediately went in search of them.
